

DiCapitellos Daughter

Dianne, daughter of London restaurant owner Francis DiCapitello, flies home from a two year mission tour in Africa and no sooner is she settled again in the UK than her father has a heart attack and dies. Immediately after the reading of her fathers will Dianne is told that the woman she has regarded as her mother is in fact not and a Lady Jennifer Connaught with whom Francis had an affair is her real mother. This has an immediate and life changing affect on her. An Englishman, leader of a rebel group in Africa and who carried out atrocities which Dianne witnessed comes to England in an attempt to silence her. In trying to do so he is killed in a car crash. Later Dianne has an affair with an African prince, a tribal leader staying in England on business and from which a son is born. Shortly after his return tom Africa Dianne is told that he has been killed in an air crash and she is distraught. She overcomes her loss, moves on in the restaurant world and branches out into partnership in a country hotel where she eventually finds the happiness she has been searching for.
