

Five Hundred Sirens

Jay Shearers edgy comedic turn captures the raw underside of the urban experience-the wails in the night, whether from sirens that seem to come from everywhere, or the moans and groans from the apartment next door. In the end its very much a love story, but one that refuses to pull its punches. It will shake you even as it keeps you smiling. Eugene Wildman, author of The World of Glass and Montezumas Ball. What a pleasure to follow the soul-searching voice of Jay Shearers narrator, Philip Palliard-stay at home dad, philanderer-in-spite-of-himself, and friend so empathic he feels his neighbors transgressions as his own. Shearers writing is utterly engaging-a rare blend of wit, introspection and charm. Molly McNett, author of One Dog Happy, winner of the Iowa Short Fiction Award.
