

PAKISTAN LOVES AMERICA: Comedy is difficult to resist

When a Christian woman and a Muslim man enter into a relationship, their adventure is less conflicting and more entertaining. At the time of their first encounter, the man has been living as a Pakistani born American citizen for 17 years. The woman is as small town mid-western as anyone can be. She never imagines she will have a romantic relationship with a man from the other side of the world. At this point, her worldly experiences have been extremely limited. She introduces him to her American dysfunctional family. In his childhood, and teenage years his town in Pakistan was under Marshal Law, but he has no experience with the American Family Dysfunctional Law. Something strange keeps this odd couple together. It may be love or something else.
